The proto-shitlords who programmed all the based video games of the early 2000s are the only thing that protected me from the Epstein McGraw-Hill public education system. Video games of that era have strong paranoia themes that prompt you to dig, explore, and question far more than a fat public school teacher ever could. Anyone who transforms their house into a rainbow pink vagina is using their child as an excuse to be a child. Children don't need to be catered to. They can be raised to ride horses and shoot arrows by 5 years of age. Thats perfectly normal and has been done for thousands of years. People who infantilize their entire house because they have a child are suspect.

MANIFESTO III: EVERYTHING ELSE

On the non-manosphere dimensions of dissident consciousness

I. THE EPSTEIN KEYSTONE

Everything connects to the island.

This is not a metaphor. The Epstein files are not primarily about sex. They are about proof of concept. The proof is this: the people who run your institutions — your courts, your media, your medical establishment, your financial system — are not merely corrupt in the normal sense. They are participants in a documented child abuse network that operated for decades in full view of the agencies whose job was to stop it.

The most important thing about the Epstein files is not the details, which you cannot act on. The most important thing is what the files reveal about the people in your life who don't care. A very large portion of the people around you — colleagues, family members, neighbors — were informed of this and chose to move on. That is the real data point. Not the island. The normies.

Quick reminder: while they were torturing your teenage self with DEI workshops and gender ideology in the 2000s, they were raping and murdering children at Epstein's island. The timeline is not a coincidence. The social engineering and the abuse are the same project.

II. THE QUICK REMINDER IS A TECHNOLOGY

The most efficient content format in the dissident information space is two sentences and a photograph.

Quick reminder: the shareholders stepped over his body and conducted the 8am meeting anyway, two hours after his death.

That note requires no argument. It contains no thesis. It simply points. The reader supplies the conclusion because the conclusion is obvious to anyone who has not been successfully managed into incapacity.

The "quick reminder" format works because it exploits the gap between what people know and what they allow themselves to feel about what they know. The normie knows the shareholders did this. They have filed it under "that's just how things are." The reminder forces the feeling back to the surface.

This is not rhetoric. It is a jailbreak.

III. ENSHITTIFICATION IS POLICY

Every product is three times more expensive and has been enshittified beyond use. Every new object fights you viciously for the crime of using it.

In 1100 AD, meat was the king's property. By 2020, meat causes pandemics. The campaign against whatever is good — whatever is dense, nourishing, old, real — is not market failure. It is policy. Old-growth wood replaced by timber that rots. Silver quarters replaced by tokens. Beef replaced by seed oil. This note is not about wood. It is not about meat. It is about the systematic replacement of things that work with things that don't, administered by institutions that profit from the difference.

Every product gets worse because making things better is not the goal. The goal is dependency. A washing machine that lasts thirty years creates one customer. A washing machine with a proprietary app, a subscription model, and a five-year lifespan creates a revenue stream. You are not the customer. You are the resource.

Your new year's resolution should not be to work harder. You are already working for them.

IV. THE MEDIOCRACY

The United States is a Mediocracy: a meritocracy for the mediocre.

Doctors are promoted not on intelligence but on compliance. Teachers not on effectiveness but on credential accumulation. Lawyers not on justice but on billable hours. Government workers not on performance but on the ability to avoid accountability while collecting a salary.

The counterfeit civil servant is the paradigm case. They dress like firefighters. They sit in firehouses. When your house burns, it is your problem. They supported the affirmative action policies that installed them. They destroyed the careers of anyone who objected. When the city burned, they watched. This is not incompetence. Incompetence is random.

Boomers: just walk into the office and ask for a job. The office: locked. The recruiter: an algorithm. The interview: automated. The rejection: a template. The advice: still to walk into the office.

The system promotes mediocrity because excellence is a threat to the system. A genuinely competent person asks why things are done this way. A mediocre person is grateful to be included.

V. THE NPC IS A REAL CATEGORY

Substack exists because Millennials were trained all their lives to perform non-work in meme cubicle offices. At some point capital realized it could pay them less to do the same performance from home and call it freedom.

The NPC is not an insult. It is a neurological description. The NPC processes inputs and generates socially acceptable outputs without any intervening cognition. They are not lying when they repeat the institutional talking point. They genuinely cannot distinguish between their own thoughts and the thoughts they have been given.

The Scamdemic was a test. The NPCs fell for it. The globalists noted this and will do it again. The only question after each psyop is not whether the normies fell for it — they always do — but whether you personally updated your model of the world, or whether you filed it under "that's just how things are" and moved on.

In retrospect, the Westboro Baptist Church was right about everything before any of us understood how bad things had gotten. This is not an endorsement of their methods. It is an observation about the predictive accuracy of people the mainstream dismissed as lunatics.

VI. GEOPOLITICS IS ALSO RIGGED

What if doing a bunch of cocaine and dying in a Thai hot tub was the optimal move? It was all downhill after 2011 anyway.

This is a joke. It is also a genuine geopolitical position. 2011 was the peak of American unipolar dominance, the last moment before the Arab Spring, before Syria, before the Ukraine escalation, before the visible fracturing of the institutional consensus. Everything since has been managed decline administered by people who are either too stupid to see it or smart enough to profit from it.

It is illegal to bring a plant across the border because you might disrupt the ecosystem. It is legal to airdrop millions of people with no shared history, language, or legal tradition into European cities, because that is diversity. The inconsistency is not an oversight. It is the point. The rule is applied where it produces compliance and suspended where it produces replacement.

Iran, China, Russia — these are not threats. They are pretexts. The real project is the managed demolition of the Western middle class, which requires external enemies to justify the domestic surveillance, the monetary expansion, and the gradual elimination of the institutions that made the middle class possible.

VII. THE ODDITIES ARE THE HONEST PART

How were dinosaurs supposed to fuck? Someone explain it to me. This is a bigger conspiracy than 9/11.

Baby formula is kept behind locked acrylic glass not to prevent theft, but to reinforce the perception that it is nutritious, when in reality it is a bioweapon and a vector of class warfare against specific demographics.

The CIA killed nu metal because it was too empowering for young white men.

Pipe smoking makes men into alpha males. There is zero chance that HR Karens and beta males smoke pipes. This is a natural filter.

These notes do not connect to a thesis. They are observations that arrived faster than the argument could follow. This is the most honest category in the entire archive — not ideology applied to evidence, but genuine curiosity unmediated by agenda. The dinosaur sex question is real. The pipe tobacco observation is real. The baby formula claim may be wrong, but it comes from the same place: a mind that looks at the ordinary and asks why.

The conspiracy theorist and the scientist share a method. They both refuse to accept the official answer when the official answer doesn't make sense. The difference is peer review. GLO doesn't have peer review. He has 5 notes a day and an audience of people who feel the same thing.

That is enough.
